The Latest Fad, Totem Jewelry

TOTEM jewelry is the fad of the moment. Taking the animal in your coat of arms or choosing one if you inherit none, you wear jewelry to represent it, have your soul and watch engraved with it and display it even in your jeweled hatpins. It is your totem or badge after the Indian fashion.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

FASHION'S LATEST ORDERS.

Draped overskirts and festooned sashes seem to be returning to favor again. For evening wear draped skirts are almost exclusively shown. Of course, for day and general use the fashion is not as adaptable, but scarfs and ribbon sashes are added to give the new effects even on lingerie frocks. Sometimes a sash is brought around the waist to the front and then taken back, suggestive of panniers, and knotted at the left side or in the back. Only a tall, slender girl could stand such a decoration and an artistic arrangement is necessary to success even when the figure is slender.

Bronze ties have evidently had their day, so those contemplating buying footwear for vacation use must select some other kind of leather. High boots in bronze are still considered fashionable, but their high price makes them prohibitive except to wealthy purchasers. Suede is always in good taste, and cravenette ties with kid vamps are natty looking. Bronze slippers for evening wear are correct, so it seems that only the low shoe variety in bronze has fallen under the ban.

In the morning almost every other woman appears on the boulevard in a frock of foulard, and, strangely enough, they are almost all of black and white. This seems to be the favorite selection for the hours before 12, but in the afternoon, between dejeuner and the hour of tea, madame still wears foulard, but of a charruese green. There seems to be a singular unanimity of opinion on this point, all the result is interesting.

In some attractive styles for children's dresses it is noted that a great many materials with white foundation are used for sheer frocks, though plain flens, chambray and the like are generally used for the tub frocks. While frocks of this season are much on the order of the princess shapes, though some are French frocks, long waists and full and short skirts. The latter is dainty when a pleasure hat is worn.

The influence of the orient has made itself felt for the last two years, but never more strongly than during this season. Japan has just sent to us some new and lovely parasols with handles wonderfully carved and ribs of wood. Many of these are appropriately covered with pongee, and they are almost exactly the shape carried in the land of cherry blossoms.

White dresses are mostly made of

Cultivate Housekeeping Instincts In Your Children

No Woman Is a Success Who Cannot Make a Home.

It is up to every mother to cultivate in her daughter domestic instincts in order to counteract the growing feeling that domestic details are a waste of time and "beneath" the woman of brains.

But there are no such things, let me tell you!

Women are extremists today. It seems that nothing is worth the while but to rush madly out of doors and indulge in the whirl of business. Tomorrow there may be a revolution of feeling quite as sudden.

The well balanced woman, after all, is the one who wins out. She does not lose sight of the home side of life, because on that depends much of her success in business. You may scorn housekeeping all your life, but the woman who has no home shows the effect of this lack very soon indeed.

Most quarrels in history, in business and in love come from indigestion, and the latter is derived from badly chosen, carelessly cooked food; also the quality of food you eat shows in the brain work you do, so let no one despise either the cook or the kitchen.

And is there anything more depressing to the woman who attempts to do business than a house at sixes or sevens, where one cannot find anything?

The business woman need not attend to the details of housekeeping herself, but she should know all about them in order to direct others. And the art of housekeeping should be hers whether she lives in two rooms or in a big house. No woman is a success if she cannot make a home of the place where she lives.

Beautifying the Neck.

A brown neck is rather unsightly now that the high neckband is giving place to the low turnover collar for summer wear. Glycerin and lemon juice are excellent for whitening the neck. Take an ounce of glycerin and add the juice of a fresh lemon. Rub this into the neck for three nights running with a piece of clean cotton wool or linen rag. But if this treatment does not suffice or if the neck is very discolored there is no need to despair.

batiste, though the barred goods are used and trimmed with medium heavy laces. They are very durable and plait nicely. A pretty arrangement on a one-piece dress is to outline brooches over the shoulders, bringing the ends to the hem.

Some of the most beautiful of linen frocks are in soft dull tones of yellow, often with white embroidery.

To wear with the colored and the lined dress is a colored silk handker-
